INTRODUCTION.

To the Class of Eighty-five:

The report which I have the honor to present to you, has been long delayed. But I feel sure that you will pardon me when you know that the delay was one which I could not avoid.

In the preparation of the following pages, I have been guided by the admirable first reports of several preceding classes. One feature of other reports is, however, omitted in this. Other secretaries have endeavored to give some account of the doings of temporary members after they left the class. I found that no satisfactory record of that kind could be made at this time. I have, therefore, preferred to omit it for the present.

The value of future reports must depend largely upon you. I need not tell you how important it is that each man shall respond promptly to all requests for information. I wish that you would, also, write to me sometimes when not especially requested to do so. For example; I should be glad to have you acknowledge the receipt of this report.

We shall entertain the Class next Commencement in 4 Hollis. Notices will be published in the Boston Advertiser, Post and Transcript, and the more important ones in the New York Times.

This is, I believe, the first Harvard class report ever written west of the Missouri river. It is a little strange that a record of this kind should be prepared so far from the scenes which it recalls. But the fact may, perhaps, serve to remind us that our college associations, the thoughts and the friendships of our Harvard life, have become independent of place and time. I find them as sweet and helpful on the banks of the Missouri as they once were by the Charles.

Your classmate,

WALTER A. HALBERT.

Theodore Dunham: περὶ τῶν τοῦ Ἐπικούρου διατριβῶν.

"Harvard has seldom celebrated a more pleasant and brilliant Commencement Day than that of yesterday. The weather was bright and comfortable; the college green was in its best array; the graduating class acquitted itself handsomely; the alumni were present in great number; an excellent choice of Overseers was made; the Vice-President of the United States, the late minister of the Court of St. James and the governor of the State gave distinction to the assemblage at dinner and added to the pleasures of the after dinner congratulations. President Eliot had an agreeable eport of progress to present, and all in all the occasion was a delightful one; a fit crowning of a successful college year." Editorial in Boston Advertiser of June 25, 1885.

CLASS SUPPERS.

A very pleasant class supper was held in Boston in Sophomore year.

It was found necessary to abandon the class supper proposed for Junior year.

The Senior class supper was held at Young's Hotel, Boston, on the evening of June 22, 1885. One hundred and forty-two men were present. Mr. W. H. Baldwin presided and Mr. J. E. Thayer served as toastmaster. The speeches and music were wholly informal, and were much enjoyed. The large attendance and the enthusiasm shown promise well for the success of future triennial dinners.

CLASS LIVES.

About half the Class have written Class Lives. The number is decidedly larger than in the case of any of the three preceding Classes. For this the Secretary is very grateful. He wishes to thank those who have complied with his request. If others had known how much they could assist and encourage him in this way, their lives would probably have been written. It is not yet too late.

CLASS CRADLE.

All who received the degree of A. B. in 1885 are eligible for this distinction. The Secretary and Class Committee will duly consider the first claim. If it is found to be just, the fortunate child will receive the cradle and the best wishes of the Class of 1885.

Our Class Fund is not a large one. We have reason, however, to expect that it will be considerably increased by the contributions of several men who have not yet subscribed, but have signified their intention to do so. All such subscriptions should be sent to the Secretary, and will be promptly acknowledged by him.

The Class Day Committee deserves especial praise for its contribution to the Fund. After giving us a remarkably successful Class Day, the Committee has remitted a balance which is one of the largest, perhaps the very largest, ever received by a class fund from that source.

"It seems almost unnecessary, at this late day, to speak concerning the honorable place that '85 has made. No class has been more patriotic in regard to matters pertaining to the college; no class on the whole has left a better record behind it. In athletics, '85 has been especially prominent, and every college team has received its support. In scholarship, it has taken a high rank, and each of the papers can bear witness to the ability and earnest work of the senior boards."—From an editorial in The Daily Crimson of June 19, 1885.

GREENOUGH THAYER.

Greenough Thayer was born at Salem, Massachusetts, July 6, 1862. His father was pastor of a church in Salem, and, afterward a professor in the Theological Seminary at Andover. Thayer received his early education at the Andover High School, and, in the autumn of 1878, when sixteen years old, he entered the Junior Class of Phillips Academy at Andover. In due time he graduated, in the year 1881, standing third in a class of nearly thirty members. While at the Academy, he spoke in the competition for the Means Prizes, and won the third prize. The speakers for these prizes are chosen for the merits of their compositions, and the prizes are given upon the basis of the merits both of the piece and of its delivery. Thus, to win a Means prize, a good composition is necessary as well as a good delivery. Thayer also won the first Dove prize for writing the best paper in a Latin examination open to Seniors only.

In the summer of 1881, Greenough Thayer entered the Class of '85, at Harvard College, without conditions. At the beginning of his Freshman year, he took a first Lee Prize, for excellence in reading English aloud. The two years of his college life passed quietly for Thayer, while he was laying the foundation for what must have been a life of usefulness. He gave much of his attention to the classics, in which he always did well.

In the summer after his Sophomore year at college, when twenty-one years old, Greenough Thayer went to pass a part of his vacation at the seashore. One day while there he went surf-bathing with three friends, two girls and another boy. The surf may have been high, or there may have been a strong current setting off shore; but be this as it may, for some reason or other, the two girls were suddenly in great danger of being drowned. In spite of the peril to themselves, Thayer and his friend went to the assistance of their helpless companions. The noble attempt was in vain, and, in trying to save the girls, the boys were drowned with them.

Much can be said of the personal character of Greenough Thayer. Amiable, kind-hearted, unselfish, upright, and honest, he was liked by all; while to his particular friends, his loss can never be made up.

Truly, if Memorial Hall commemorated, not alone those sons of Harvard who died in defence of their country, but all those who died in a good cause, as men should die, the name of Greenough Thayer would be one of the first on the tablets.

WILLIAM ANTHONY WOODSIDE.

William Anthony Woodside, the second son of Franklin and Helen Frances Woodside, was born in Roxbury, Massachusetts, March 7, 1864. When he was two years of age, his family moved to North Weymouth, where his mother died when he was six. Three years later, he returned to Roxbury, where he lived till admitted to college. When eleven, he entered the Roxbury Latin School, from which he graduated in 1881, and entered Harvard in the fall.

During the afternoon of August 3, 1884,—one of the hottest days of the summer,—while bathing with three other young men, in Hammond Pond, Woodside broke a blood vessel, and died within a few minutes. He was buried in Weymouth.

Woodside's exceptional ability enabled him easily to take high rank in the Class, although his college expenses were for the most part paid by himself. During the three years that he was in college he made many friends, who deeply regretted his early death.
